Book Description

Martin Luther's Large Catechism is Luther's summary of his own teachings. He wrote the catechism to remind the infant Lutheran Church of the things for which they stood and to advise them as to how they should live and worship. His explanations are clear and straight-forward. He is remarkably blunt at times, not being a man fond of euphemism, in his admonition for a godly life against a worldly one. The down-to-earth, common sense theology that made Luther, and the ultimately the Protestant Reformation, so successful is on display in this book.
